----------	----------

Question	Response
Risk 1 — Market direction	Strategy depends on accurate directional calls in Asian equity markets. Adverse macro shifts (e.g., capital controls, sudden policy changes) can lead to extended drawdowns.
Risk 2 — Counterparty	Concentrated trading relationships with a small number of prime brokers in Hong Kong and Singapore. Failure or restriction at one of these venues materially impairs strategy execution.
Risk 3 — Liquidity	Some smaller-cap names may have limited intraday depth. In stressed conditions, exit costs can exceed recent observed bid-ask spreads.
